Volume 48:3

The Gateway to the Americas

Linnet Suárez, Editor-in-Chief¹

ARTICLES & COMMENTS

The University of Miami Inter-American Law Review has a special place at the University of Miami School of Law. As the City of Miami is internationally recognized as the “Gateway to the Americas,” both the journal and the law school represent the important union between the United States and the Americas. The University of Miami Inter-American Law Review continues to dedicate itself to providing a scholarly forum to discuss major international and inter-American legal developments. Volume 48:3 (Spring 2017) touches on current changes in the legal community resulting from technological advances, complex arbitration, and international treaties.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The University of Miami Inter-American Law Review owes many acknowledgements for the production of Volume 48:3. First, we would like to thank Janet E. Stearns, Dean of Students, who has been instrumental in the Review’s success. We also want to thank Gloria Garcia, our administrative assistant, for her tireless work ethic and constant communication. We would also like to thank Patricia White, Dean of Miami Law, for her continuous support of student-run publications. Our Review is also heavily indebted to Emily Horowitz, Assistant Director of Academic Affairs & Student Services and Special Advisor to the Law Reviews, who has supported us with patient guidance at every step of publication.
