The Executive Board invites the submission of articles of substantial legal merit. Authors seeking publication in the University of Miami Law Review should submit manuscripts with footnotes typed in a separate section from the text, all double- or triple-spaced, including any quoted or indented material. The Review assumes no responsibility for the return of any material.

Although the Review generally gives great deference to an author's work, the Review retains the right to determine the final published form of every article. As a rule, footnotes should conform to the 17th edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation. Citations to Florida authorities, however, should conform to the University of Miami Law Review Style Sheet, available upon request. The Review also uses A Manual of Style (1986), prepared by the U.S. Government Printing Office, for additional guidelines on punctuation, capitalization, and compounding. For matters of style and usage, the editors recommend William Strunk, Jr. & E.B. White, The Elements of Style (3d ed. 1979), and Webster's Dictionary of English Usage (1989).

Except as otherwise expressly provided in the first footnote of any article, the author of each article published in the Review grants permission for copies of that article to be made and used by nonprofit educational institutions, provided that the user identifies the author and journal, affixes proper notice of copyright to each copy, and sends notice and a description of the use to the University of Miami Law Review. In addition, except as otherwise expressly provided, the author of each article grants the University of Miami Law Review the right to authorize the publication, reproduction, and distribution of the article in electronic, computerized retrieval systems, and similar forms, and to transfer such rights.

The University of Miami Law Review provides an opportunity for student members and outside authors to submit articles that discuss anything of general interest to law students, academicians, or practicing attorneys. A small section, entitled "Special Issues and Topics," is available for such pieces. This section is designed to provide members of the entire legal community with interesting and creative law-related material.

The University of Miami Law Review is indexed in Contents of Current Legal Periodicals, Current Law Index, Index to Legal Periodicals, and Public Affairs Information Service, Inc., and is available in WESTLAW and LEXIS.
