DEDICATION

Professor Daniel E. Murray was born in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1925. In 1932 Daniel moved with his family to Miami. He has since remained a member of the community, attending St. Theresa's School in Coral Gables until he joined the U.S. Army, where he served with distinction in the European Theatre in World War II.

After leaving the service he returned to Miami and came to the Law School. As a student, his commitment to excellence became evident. He was a member of the Editorial Board of the Review (then called the Quarterly), he became a charter member of the Phi Delta Phi honorary, and graduated second in his class.

The practice of law lured Dan from academic life, but his successful Miami law practice did not prevent his eventual return to the Law School. In 1957 he joined the University of Miami Law Faculty as an assistant professor. In 1963 he received his S.J.D. from New York University. In 1967 he was awarded a full professorship at Miami.

At the Law School Daniel Murray is respected by his colleagues for his active role in school affairs and continuing scholarly publications. As Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee he has been a leader in developing academic standards for the School. He is a prolific legal writer, having published fifty-seven articles in over twenty journals. He has written in legal areas as diverse as constitutional law, criminal law, commercial law and domestic relations. This past year he published four articles. During the summers of 1962-1965 he performed a comparative study of criminal law in Spain, Guatemala, Mexico, and Peru under the auspices of a Ford Foundation Fellowship. From this work he became a coeditor of the volume, The Administration of Criminal Justice.

Dan Murray is admired by students as a talented teacher and active advisor to the Law Review. Recognition came to Daniel Murray for his inspired law teaching in 1968. The School's five-year alumni and the graduating senior class of 1968 voted him the Outstanding Teacher Award. A generation of students have studied law with him and have benefited from his fine teaching. Professor Murray became faculty advisor to the Review in 1958. Through his relationship with the writers and editors of the University of Miami Law Review he has evidenced his dedication to legal scholarship. Under his guidance the Review has broadened its scope from reporting regional events to considering national issues. He has counseled hundreds of young writers in their search for excellence in legal writing and analysis.

The authors of these comments on Daniel Murray have been his colleagues and friends since 1957. They are happy to have been given the opportunity to contribute to this dedication.

The Faculty Tribute to Doctor Daniel Murray observes that “a generation of students have studied law with him and have benefited from his fine teaching.” Those of us privileged to have had Doctor Murray as an instructor and mentor concur wholeheartedly with the Faculty Tribute.

Countless students have shared the experience of knocking on Doctor Murray’s door, receiving a response, and entering the office to find a bespectacled man engulfed in a sea of casebooks, legal journals, and reporters. This man, whose prolific works furnish ample evidence of his devotion to the legal profession, has always managed to find time to talk with his students, to share his thoughts, and to offer much needed encouragement.

Doctor Murray, while lecturing for more than twenty years in the field of commercial law and its related areas, has managed constantly to find new insights and to develop fresh approaches to familiar material. Students, finding themselves confronted with difficult and often confusing material, have benefited immensely from Doctor Murray’s generous assistance and personal attention. We at the Review deeply appreciate the unsparing commitment of time and energy he has devoted toward enhancing the quality of our publication.

To paraphrase Justice Holmes, the life of the law is a function of the integrity and dedication of those who teach it. Doctor Murray has not only given much of his life to the law, he has given the law life.
