It has been the policy of the Review to publish the biennial survey of Florida law in one issue. A glance at the Table of Contents will indicate that this has been discontinued. This issue is Part One of a two part survey; Part Two will follow in Volume XIV, number four. We would like to explain the reason for this change.

In the preparing of this Fourth Survey, it became apparent that in some fields of law the number of reported cases from 1957 through 1959 greatly exceeded those for the prior two-year period. This fact necessarily caused a corresponding increase in the size of the articles submitted. In fact, the materials were so extensive that we realized it would be impossible to collect the entire survey in one edition. Thus, in effect, our decision to separate the survey was really made for us by reason of the increased efficiency of our appellate court system.

Along with an increase in reported cases, the past two years have provided Florida jurisprudence with some truly fascinating and significant developments in practically every phase of law.

It gives the Review deep satisfaction to present these developments to the Bar in our Fourth Survey of Florida Law.
